The Graphic Communication Technology program at Millersville University is one of several concentrations of study in Applied Engineering and Technology Management. The Graphic Communication Technology program provides students with both theoretical knowledge and practical skills that are relevant for careers in the graphics industry. This meeting will provide attendees with an opportunity to see the graphics labs in action, as well as meet current students and faculty in the program.

Interactive Open House & Networking

Prospective employers and students alike will have an opportunity to see our graphics labs in action and learn about the kinds of technologies and experiences that Millersville students get throughout their course of study. If you are a student who is considering furthering your education in graphics, this is a great chance to meet faculty and current students in our program to see if this is a fit for you. If you are an employer looking for an ambitious contributor to join your company, our students will be available to talk with you about their qualifications and goals. Join us from 4:30–6:00 pm to take part in this open house and networking event and print your own souvenir t-shirt.

Careers Panel Discussion

Hear from recent graduates of Millersville's graphic communication program. They will share their experiences in making the transition from school to the workforce and provide insight into what they see as the future of our industry. The Panel begins at 6:45 pm
